

What Endurance Racing Taught Me

A question I get asked often.

I'm a state champion mountain bike racer and a national champion in 24-hour endurance racing. Training for those races never came down to one big effort.

It came down to breaking an enormous challenge into checkpoints, and adjusting to real conditions along the way, weather, terrain, how my body actually felt that day versus the plan on paper.

“Progress happens through checkpoints, pacing, and smart decisions made under real circumstances.”

That's where the name, and the whole approach, comes from.
